THE debate over Ghana's place on the global film map has resurfaced, this time sparked by Nigerian filmmaker J Leo Uche, who believes the country sits on a goldmine of talent and resources yet continues to miss opportunities that could catapult its film industry onto the world stage.

Uche lamented the lack of bold, decisive steps from Ghanaian filmmakers and stakeholders as a major hurdle.

Speaking to Graphic Showbiz on recently, he pointed to the recently held FESTAC Africa Festival in Accra from

Donzy Chaka and Kofi Kinaata

I WATCHED an interview on Oyerepa Entertainment Review with Donzy Chaka, where he said Kofi Kinaata never paid him for collaborating on the song, Crusade.

He also mentioned that they are not friends and I find it very difficult to believe him. Isn't this the same Donzy who's always at Kofi Kinaata place, eating gobe with him?

Honestly, these two just make you laugh. If you follow Kofi Kinaata and Donzy, you'd know these two are hilarious together. They are celebrity besties on TikTok and all over the internet. They take delight in trolling each other in such a funny way when they go for interviews.

While I don't know if it's true that Kofi Kinaata didn't pay him, I do know they are friends because their chemistry is obvious on social media.

However, Kofi, if you really haven't paid Donzy, I beg you, do the needful.

KiDi

I FEEL so sorry for KiDi when he said he didn't get a chance to collaborate with Daddy Lumba .

He told George Quaye on Joy Prime he had a song on which he was to work with Daddy Lumba but couldn't get the opportunity. Too bad.

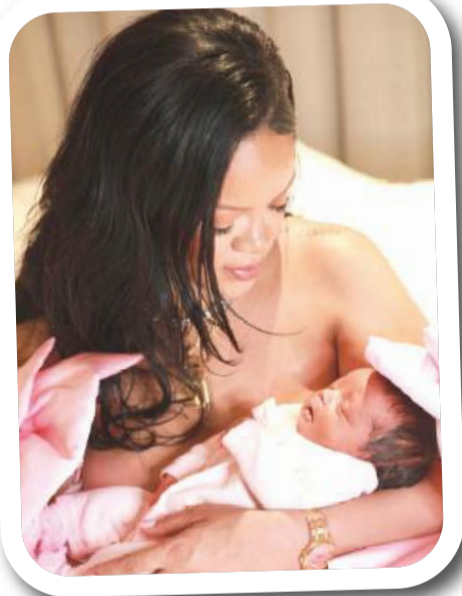

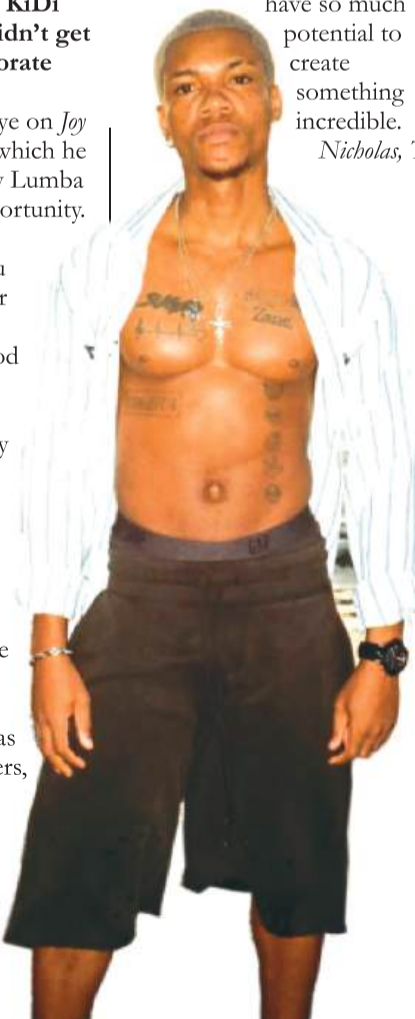

Sometimes in life, you make plans and hope for something, but things don't work your way. God has other plans. I can imagine how pained he must feel because Daddy Lumba is a legend, and collaborating with him would have been a dream come true.

All the same, I hope KiDi can find another artiste to work with if he still wants to pursue the project. There are so many music icons such as Kojo Antwi among others, who could also be amazing to work with.

KiDi, I hope you see this and consider exploring other opportunities, you still have so much potential to create something incredible.

Rihanna

I WOULD like to congratulate my favourite pop star, Rihanna, on the birth of her baby!

The news was so heartwarming, and I'm genuinely happy for Rihanna and A$AP.

She has finally welcomed a little girl, after having two strong boys. I can tell this is something she's been looking forward to for a long time.

It's funny how people say Rihanna is "always pregnant," but I think her family is now complete with this beautiful baby girl.

I wish Rihanna and A$AP all the love, joy, and blessings as they grow their family together. I'm also hoping we get some new music from her soon!

Showboy

AT this point, I think Showboy is doing too much. Anytime there's an event, he comes out to complain about not being invited or included on the bill.

Now, with Sarkodie's Kumasi Rapperbolic concert, he's saying Sarkodie only invited "low-esteem" artistes. Why call your colleague artistes such names? Aren't we supposed to support each other?

Well, if he wasn't invited, he could have contacted Sarkodie directly instead of going online to troll him. I feel artistes often let misunderstandings turn into public trolling which is not cool.

Showboy really needs to slow down because this behaviour is unnecessary. I hope Sarkodie doesn't respond.
