Wutah is dead forever

— Wutah Kobby

By Jessica Love Otoo

FOR fans still holding out hope for a Wutah comeback, Wutah Kobby has a straightforward message: The group is 'dead'!

According to the singer, it's time to move on because there is no possibility of reconciliation, even after the duo's brief attempted reunion in 2017. "Wutah is dead, disbanded and I don't see any reuniting soon or ever," Kobby

Black Star Experience

As an arts enthusiast and tourism advocate, I was excited when The Black Star Experience, Ghana's flagship tourism initiative was launched by President Mahama in May last year.

The project is aimed to showcase Ghana's culture and creativity year-round.

Despite its potential, the secretariat hasn't received budgetary allocation, hindering its operations. Coordinator, Rex Omar, stated that most planned projects weren't executed in 2025 due to this lack of funding.

Interesting right? Well, I urge government to prioritise funding for this initiative.

King Promise and Mr Eazi

I've always loved Ghana/Naija collabo and That Way by King Promise and Mr Eazi, it's definitely a banger and one of my favourites now.

The song's a perfect blend of Afrobeats and nostalgia, sampling Backstreet Boys' I Want It That Way and turning it into something fresh and exciting.

King Promise's smooth vocals and Mr Eazi's laid-back style vibe off each other perfectly, making for a chill and enjoyable listen.

The song is part of their upcoming joint album, See What We've Done, and it's definitely a win for African music. I pray to see more of such collaborations, in future.

Delay

I am writing to express my disappointment and concern about a recent interview on Delay's show where she asked content creator, Ama Yeboah if she is a virgin.

This question was inappropriate and invasive, crossing a boundary of personal privacy.

Public figures deserve respect and dignity in their personal lives. Such questions can be seen as insensitive and contribute to a culture of unnecessary scrutiny.

I urge media personalities to reflect on the impact of their questions and prioritise respect in future interviews.

Rest well, Ebo Taylor

Highlife legend, Ebo Taylor, passed away on February 7, 2026. A legendary guitarist, composer, and bandleader, he shaped highlife and Afrobeat music for over six decades.

His contributions to Ghana's music heritage are immeasurable. Rest well Sir, your contributions to Ghanaian culture and the global music scene will be deeply missed.
