Happy Easter Holidays to all

Easter is one of the most important celebrations on the Christian calendar. It is a time for Christians all over the world to glorify and give thanks for the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, the only begotten son of God.

For many Christians and particularly for Catholics, Easter is the joyful conclusion of Lent, a season devoted to prayers, fasting and penitence.

With the Easter festivities here with us again, starting from tomorrow, Good Friday till Easter Monday, many Christians will reflect on their lives and appreciate the precious gift of God for mankind in the death and resurrection story.

As such, Christian worshippers will attend church on Good Friday and Easter Sunday to mark the death and resurrection of Christ respectively.

But while the spiritual significance undoubtedly takes centre stage during the season, it is equally worth noting that the period attracts lots of merrymaking and both Christians and non-Christians savour the fun moments.

For instance, the tradition of churches hosting church picnics and fun games on Easter Monday has been a great feature of the Easter celebrations as well.

Apart from the church, it is a time for urban residents to go back to their hometowns to support in developmental projects.

But that is not all, just like the Christmas festivities, many event organisers cash in during the season.

Graphic Showbiz urges event organisers to give patrons value for their money because we are not in easy times and it will be most unfair to short-change people when they buy tickets to patronise your events.

There should be adequate security at these event centres, as such occasions is a time criminals up their game to rob people.

Tight security should not be limited to event centres but everywhere so that citizens can go about their activities freely without any fear. This is a message to the Ghana Police and other security agencies.

We will also ask revellers to events and other social gatherings not to over-indulge. As usual, if you drink, don't drive and if you drive, don't drink. Let's be moderate with whatever we do as we have fun.

Having said all that, we are Showbiz would like to wish our cherished readers and partners a very happy Easter. May the death and resurrection of Christ reassure us of everlasting life with our creator.

We promise to continue to bring you compelling content both online and in our e-version and trust that you continue patronising us and doing business with us. Happy Easter once again!

Gloria Osei Sarfo

I HAVE always admired Ghanaian actress Gloria Osei Sarfo because she is one of the very good actresses we have around but she is not loud.

She takes it easy in her little corner while working so hard and winning both local and international awards including the Best Supporting Actress at the Africa Magic Viewers Choice Awards.

Just recently, Gloria won an ambassadorial deal with a big jewellery company and I am very happy for her. I believe she will help push the brand to the next level.

Last Tuesday, April 4, Gloria celebrated her birthday and I would like to use this opportunity to wish her the very best going forward – good health, long life and prosperity.

Keep up the good work Miss Osei Sarfo and know that there is a lot in store for you.

Agnes Hamilton, Gbawe

Stonebwoy

STONEBWOY has been very consistent since he came onto the scene and his has been one success story after the other.

He has won a lot of laurels for himself both in his home country and outside and he keeps working so hard almost as if he is just starting his career. That is very commendable.

Stonebwoy is just about to release his fifth studio album titled 5th Dimension and I can't wait to hear the songs on it considering that he featured some of Africa's greats.

I would like to urge Stonebwoy to keep up the good work he is doing for God and country, I am so proud of him and happy for him as well.

Congratulations Stonebwoy, keep on keeping on. You are just about starting, may the good Lord be with you now and always.

Harold Amenyah

I WOULD like to congratulate Ghanaian actor Harold Amenyah on getting married over the weekend. May the good Lord see you both through this journey.

I am very happy you have found your soul mate and I pray you have a very fruitful marriage filled with all the good things in life.

Having said that, I would like to tell all those mocking his wife to back off because Harold knows what is good for him and that is what he has gone for.

It is nobody's business whether or not his wife is beautiful. Beauty, they say, lies in the eyes of the beholder and nobody has the right to dictate to anyone who they should settle on as life partners.

All those trolling Harold and his wife on social media should be ashamed of themselves.

Congratulations once again Harold and Irene, Cheers to many more fruitful years together ahead.

Matilda Frimpong, Weija
